To whom it may concern,

As an AQIS accredited veterinarian, I have examined many of Beverley Manners labradoodle puppies, for health clearances, prior to export, to purchasers overseas.

These puppies are always well presented, seem to be of sound temperament, and certainly appear healthy, with no signs of contagious or infectious diseases. They are all microchipped, sterilised and are current with vaccinations.

As a veterinarian, I do worry about the stress of early desexing in young dogs, that are not fully immunised, and prior to extensive travel. I do concede that I have not seen any detrimental physical side effects in any of the labradoodle puppies presented from Beverley Manners.

The administrative preparation and necessary paperwork, for exports, from Beverley, is exemplary.

I would not hesitate to recommend her stock to potential labradoodle purchasers.

Yours Faithfully,
