Hi Bev, here is an update on Ralph. The vets say he is a very calm dog. He is trained to walk beside me on the left, no pulling on leash, as I don't allow it. He will not eat a bone or any food I put in front of him until I give him permission. I can remove food away from too, no sign of anger or aggression. He will stand at doorway and wait until I give him the sign to enter. He sits on command with a hand signal and by telling him sit, also goes into a down or drop position with another signal I use. He will do a 'stay' in my yard or at training for the 7 minutes that they teach. When we walk down the street we stop at every intersection and look for traffic and he sits by my side until I step forward. And I can leave him tethered to a tree guard outside the shops, and he patiently waits till I come out. Loves other dogs and kids, does get very exited though, and then I firmly tell him "leave it" and he calms down. Has not destroyed any toys soft or hard, but did take a likeing to the black plastic pots plants come in. If I ask him forward and say "lap lap" and tap my lap he will gently put his head in my lap to be stroked. He has never been allowed on the furniture, but loves to lay on the cool floor, where I may have to step over him, and he doesn't even flinch. He is not afraid of storms, we watch the lightning together. Bev, what more can I say, you have done a great job with these precious dogs, and I consider myself very fortunate to have "Sir" Ralph in my life.
